

“May You Have The Strength Of Eagles' Wings, The Faith And Courage To Fly To New Heights, And The Wisdom Of The Universe To Carry You There”

~Native American Blessing~

It is my vision that my children have the strength and courage to make important life decisions that honor their self, family, and community. I believe that one of those important life decisions is waiting to have sex. I believe that by waiting, my children will have a better chance to make their dreams come true. I commit to share this vision with my children by talking with them about their future, their responsibilities, and the important life decisions that shape their future.
